CHILDREN, FAMILIES, AND STATES

Time Policies of Childcare, Preschool, and Primary Education in Europe

Edited by Karen Hagemann, Konrad H. Jarausch & Cristina Allemann-Ghionda

Summary

Due to the demand for flexible working hours and employees who are available around the clock, the time patterns of childcare and schooling have increasingly become a political issue. The book compares the development of different "time policies" of half-day and all-day provisions in a variety of Eastern and Western European countries since the end of World War II. This innovative volume brings together internationally known experts from the fields of comparative education, history, and the social and political sciences, and makes a significant contribution to this new interdisciplinary field of comparative study.

"This is a very strong collection of essays by some of the top scholars in the field of European social policy, including both historians and social scientists. The individual chapters are richly detailed, well written, and informative, documenting a wide range of thinking and practices about children, families, and states over more than two centuries." · Sonya Michel, University of Maryland

"...a very useful collection. The editors have taken an inclusive approach to Europe: chapters cover not only the large countries such as France, Germany, or Britain but also many smaller nations: Switzerland, the Czech Republic, Hungary. Each of the national case-studies provides a concise and well-organized account of historical background and present-day contours of educational time policy." · Ann Taylor Allen, University of Louisville
